[iOS 9.0] Self-rated hearing disability among elderly people. To investigate the relationship between self-perceived disability and pure-tone threshold audiometry (PTA) in people aged 75 years and over. Cross-sectional. General practices in the Tamworth region, north-eastern England. Participants were 875 subjects participating in the Tamworth 85+ Study, a longitudinal study of the health of older people in the Tamworth region. Information about hearing disabilities was recorded using the validated Hearing Disability Index (HDI) questionnaire. PTA and self-reported hearing problems were compared. The HDI score was positively associated with PTA. Further, the prevalence of hearing disability increased with age and was influenced by gender, level of education, time since the onset of the hearing loss, and hearing aid use. The findings from this study would suggest that age-related hearing disability is multifactorial in origin.
