We report the effects of antiandrogens on breast tumor growth in a unique xenograft model. ICR female mice were inoculated with a human breast cancer cell line (MCF-7 cells). Antiandrogens R 4891 and RU 23908 significantly inhibited the development of MCF-7 breast cancer xenografts in nude mice. In vitro, R 4891 and RU 23908 were as effective as R 227 in inhibiting proliferation of MCF-7 cells in cell cycle analysis. In MCF-7 xenografts, their antiproliferative actions were accompanied by a significantly reduced apoptotic index. Although antiandrogens significantly inhibited the growth of MCF-7 breast cancer xenografts, they were not as effective as tamoxifen. Antiandrogens also inhibited the growth of transplanted human breast cancer cells in nude mice, suggesting that they may have an inhibitory effect on human breast cancer. Radon is a naturally occurring radioactive element that decays into radon daughters. Radon daughters are relatively insoluble and so accumulate in geological formations such as soils and rocks. If the radon daughters enter the soil or rock over significant periods, the concentration of radon daughters will increase. The health risk from inhaled radon daughters is an issue of growing importance in many areas of the world. World Health Organization standards for maximum permissible concentrations of radon in air vary between countries and also vary between levels of urbanization. The range of maximum permitted concentration can be from 10 Bq m<sup>-3</sup> to 200 Bq m<sup>-3</sup>. Health authorities or agencies wish to reduce the concentration of radon in air as far as possible, to protect human health. Radon may be used as a source of
