Key 2 pdf files. Through constant technological innovations, from electric energy to computers, the world of children becomes increasingly mechanical. All this means that with the passage of time, there will be less and less play with the natural world and with things of natural origin, which will have the effect of inculcating a predilection for technology. Scientific enquiry has progressed more rapidly with technological means than with “traditional” means, and sometimes the results have exceeded expectations, but sometimes this progress has
